BOSTON FIRM TO BUILD ACADEMY

General Contract Is Awarded for New Gould Building

The R. L. McPhail Co. of Boston has been awarded the general contract for the construction of the new Administration Building and work will begin as soon as the sub-contracts are awarded and the crews and materials assembled. The first work will be the moving of the old building, which was built in 1881, to a temporary foundation nearer Church Street. Classes will be held in the old building until the new one is completed. This fifth generous gift of Mr. William Bingham to Gould Academy's beautiful campus has been designed by the well known firm of architects, Coolidge and Carlson of Boston. The building will be a fireproof structure of red brick and reinforced concrete with limestone trimmings. Principal Frank E. Hanscom expects that the new Administration Building will be ready for occupancy the 28th of next February.

NEW OXFORD COUNTY AGENT

Richard F. Blanchard, Cumberland Center, has been appointed county agricultural agent for Oxford County succeeding Donald H. Ridley. It has been announced by A. L. Deering, director of the Extension Service at the University of Maine. The appointment becomes effective June 16.

Since graduating from the College of Agriculture at the University of Maine in 1931, Mr. Blanchard has been in partnership with his father in operating a 110 acre dairy farm in Cumberland Center. He is a graduate of the Greely Institute, completing his work in 1927. During three of his four years at college he spent considerable time in working in the University dairy barns. In 1930 he was a member of the Elvestock Judging Team which competed with other teams at the Eastern States Exposition, Springfield, Mass. Blanchard is a member of Alpha Gamma Rho and Alpha Zeta, the latter being an honorary agricultural fraternity.

He takes up his work in Oxford County with strong recommendations from those who can speak with authority concerning his qualifications and training.

Mr. Ridley, his predecessor in Oxford County, began his work in July 1927.

ALBION WHITMAN BRYANT

Albion Whitman Bryant passed away June 12 at the home of his older daughter, Mrs. Clarence K. Fox.

He was born in Woodstock, April 1, 1847, the son of Samuel and Rebecca Stevens Bryant, being the last of ten children.

He married Jeannette Alice Brown, daughter of James and Mary Gossom Brown, May 4, 1870.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Clarence K. Fox of Bethel and Mrs. Walter A. French of Portland.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at Greenleaf's Funeral Home, Rev. R. C. Dalzell officiating. Interment was at Locke Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Pillsbury of Bangor were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Gerard Eames, last week.

LIGHTNING AND HAIL STORMS VISIT BETHEL LAST FRIDAY

It is said that eight thunderstorms were seen from the village last Friday afternoon. Some of these passed to other sections and several visited the village. A hail storm of several minutes duration came about six o'clock. The hailstones were of unusual size, and at East Bethel it is reported that they reached the size of hen's eggs.

The cupola of the barn at the home of Mrs. Harriet Twaddle, on Church Street, was struck by lightning and a blaze started in the electric wiring and chaff below. This was extinguished with hand hoses before the arrival of the firemen.

The house occupied by Wilbur Davis and family on West Bethel Flat was also hit. A dormer window was damaged and a lot of plastered ceiling damaged. No fire was reported.

PULPWOOD THROWS CAR FROM ROAD

While travelling from No. Newry to Andover Wednesday a. m., Miss Carrie Wight of Newry met with a serious accident in driving over a stick of pulpwood which she was unable to avoid. The car was thrown against a tree and badly damaged, while Miss Wight and Mrs. L. E. Wight were rendered unconscious for some time. They were taken to the Morse home in Hanover which was near the scene of the accident by Dr. Twaddle who was the first arrival, and later returned to their homes suffering from painful bruises and cuts. Mrs. Wight's daughter Elizabeth was slightly injured.

PROF. MAINENTE HIGHLY HONORED

The Directory Committee of the New England Conservatory of Music has authorized Prof. Anton Eugene Mainente of Rumford to prepare pupils for that institution. It is understood that this is the first time that this authority has been granted by the school.

Prof. Mainente is head of the music department of Gould Academy. He gives instruction on any band or orchestral instrument and has many students in this vicinity.

His pupils from Rumford and Livermore Falls joined with the Gould orchestra at the graduation exercises last Thursday, and will again be present at the Grammar School graduation Friday evening.

A recital will be given here by Prof. Mainente's pupils on the evening of Tuesday, June 27.

BRYANT POND PLAYERS IN TRUCK OVERTURN

A bad accident occurred at Trap Corner Saturday when a trailer following a truck carrying baseball players from Bryant Pond to Canton became disconnected and overturned. Nine were injured, including Raymond Danham, aged nine, who was taken to a Lewiston hospital in critical condition; James Farnum, fractured shoulder; and Stanley Deahon, broken arm. First aid was given to Rupert Hathaway, George Hudson, Leland Austin, and Kirke Stowell, the driver of the truck.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Van Den Kerckhoven started Monday for Boston where they will meet Miss Lucien Van who has been spending the past week with a classmate in Long Island, N. Y., on her way home from Southern College, Petersburg, Va.

CLAYTON F. FOSSETT

POPULAR GOULD TEACHER WED

Wedding of Clayton F. Fossett and Miss Gertrude French at Dunmer, N. H., Friday

A wedding of much interest took place Friday morning, June 9, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan B. French at Dunmer, N. H., when their daughter, Gertrude Lillian, became the bride of Clayton F. Fossett, of Bethel and Pemaquid.

The ceremony took place beneath an evergreen arch in the living room, which was decorated with garden flowers. The Rev. Everett Thompson, pastor of the Community Church, Milan, N. H., officiated using the double ring service.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white organdie, with a long veil appliqued with pearl beads worn cap fashion and caught with a spray of orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Eleanor Pettengill of Milan was maid of honor, and the two bridesmaids were Miss Anne Fernald of West Poland and Miss Margaret D. French, sister of the bride. The bridal attendants wore summer frocks of organdie, carrying out a color scheme in the pastel shades of yellow, green and pink.

The groom chose for his best man, Allen E. French of Lancaster, N. H., brother of the bride.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. Fossett and his bride left on their wedding trip. The bride traveled in a blue and tan ensemble. They will spend the Summer at Pemaquid where an attractive home has recently been completed for them.

The bride is a graduate of Gould Academy, class of 1930, and attended Plymouth, N. H., Normal School and Nason Institute.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Fossett of Pemaquid. He is a graduate of Gorham Normal School and of Bates College. He also attended Columbia University. For several seasons he has served as an instructor at North Star Camp at Oaspee Lake. He is head of the English department at Gould Academy.

SPECIAL CITIZENS MEETING AT ROSEHOLME

Friday, June 16th at 7:30 p. m., D. L. S. Time

For the purpose of protesting the proposed intention of the Canadian National Railway to discontinue train running to Portland in the morning and train returning in the evening. The removal of this service would practically isolate Bethel, therefore please attend this meeting and signify your objection to this action of the Canadian National Railroad.

FRANK A. BROWN
10 Chairman Selectmen of Bethel.

Baccalaureate Commencement Week at Gould Academy was ushered in under smiling skies on Sunday June fourth, when the Baccalaureate services were held in the Congregational church which had been elaborately, yet tastefully, decorated by a committee representing the faculty and senior class, assisted by Mrs. G. L. Thurston.

The music was of unusual excellence. A trio composed of Miss Catherine Lyon, Miss Margaret Carter and Mrs. Barbara Carter Lyon, all alumnae of the school gave a beautiful rendition of "Open Our Eyes" by Will Macfarlane. Mr. Milan Chapin sang as a solo "The Beautiful City" with that interpretative expression, and feeling which always characterizes Mr. Chapin's singing. With Mrs. F. E. Russell at the organ there was nothing left to be desired in the music for this occasion.

The service was conducted by Rev. L. A. Edwards, pastor of the church. The anniversary sermon was delivered by Rev. Charles Helsley of the High Street Congregational Church in Auburn. His words were timely, direct, forceful and inspiring. With apt illustrations Mr. Helsley emphasized the fact that just as the yardstick has been established as the unit of measure in the business world so there are standards of life, which can be measured by yardsticks composed of those elements of character which make for that type of manhood and womanhood for which the world is crying. He urged the young people to use these yardsticks in measuring their continuous growth as they strive for true success.

Graduation Exercises

"With the blue of heaven above and the green of earth beneath" Gould's campus was never more beautiful than on Thursday morning when relatives and friends of the graduates gathered in such numbers as to exhaust the capacity of the William Bingham Gymnasium. To the strains of a march played by the Academy Orchestra, assisted by pupils of the Mainente School of Music, the school was marshalled by Eldridge Berry of the Junior class to the seats reserved for the students.

After a selection by the orchestra and the invocation by Rev. R. C. Dalzell, Miss Rosalie Thurston presented the salutatory. The simplicity and sincerity of her composition supplemented by its delivery with charming ease and choice expression made Miss Thurston's number one of real merit. To Lenore Learned, ranking third in his class, had been given the honor of transferring the Twentieth Century Club banner and presenting the class gift. With brief but sincere words of appreciation for its founder, Mrs. Marion Tapp Gehring, the speaker explained the purpose of the club, namely, the social betterment of the school. Each year at the Commencement exercises the Junior class automatically becomes a part of the club, which includes the faculty and senior class.

The class gift to the school was a framed picture representing the three Academy buildings as they have appeared since the founding of the school in 1836. This was indeed a most appropriate gift to be hung on the walls of the new building which, within a few months, will stand in the place of the present structure. This picture will serve to memorialize in the minds of Gould's children, as they return to their alma mater, those traditions and associations which grow dearer as the years go by. Mr. Learned, with distinctive poise and clearness gave a brief history of Gould's past, emphasizing its growth under Principal Hanscom's administration. With words of appreciation for Gould's past and present and with those of hopeful anticipation for the new era upon which the school is entering at the hands of its greatest benefactor, William Bingham 2d, Mr. Learned presented this fitting gift. Mr. E. C. Park, representing the Board of Trustees, accepted the gift, voicing the gratitude not only of the trustees, but of all friends of the school for this timely gift which will be appreciated in the coming years even more than now.

To select a class play adapted to a Commencement program is no easy task but "The Masque of Psyche" or "The Three Ages of the Soul of Man" proved enjoyable in its content and in its almost faultless presentation. The prologue was beautifully presented by Miss Elizabeth Hunt, whose clear mellow tones and perfect enunciation coupled with fine stage presence, made her part an excellent introduction to the play. To make special mention of any member of the cast would result in an injustice to others as well did each portray his or part. The outline of the play is suggested in the following complete program of the Commencement exercises:

Valedictory Address, Carl Morton Hansman
Awarding of Prizes
Conferring of Diplomas, Principal Frank E. Hanscom
Singing Class Ode
Benediction

The valedictory address by Carl Hansman was a scholarly composition as those who know the author would expect. He significantly made comparisons between the stress and storms of the world during the past three years and those baffling years through which Gould Academy passed to attain its present honored position among the secondary schools of New England. As the speaker feelingly expressed the gratitude of the members of his class for all that had been theirs and for what is to be for Gould's students in the immediate future, the audience burst into applause at the name of Gould's princely benefactor, William Bingham 2d. The sincerity of Mr. Hansman's address could not be questioned so feelingly did he pay his tribute of gratitude to all those who in various ways had made possible the opportunities and achievements of the Class of 1933.

Awards

Interest coupled with anxiety always awaits the awarding of prizes. The first award to be made was that of the medal offered by the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute to the student maintaining the highest rank in science and mathematics. Carl Hansman with a rank of 97 1/2 per cent in these subjects was the winner of this medal.

The scholarship Cup, presented as a class gift by the Class of 1925 to be awarded each year to the class maintaining the highest rank, was won by the Junior class. The cup was also won by this class in its freshman year.

The pupils to be awarded the medal of the National Honor Society and to be admitted to its membership were Rosalie Thurston, Carl Hansman, Leslie Learned, Elizabeth Hunt, John Thorpe and Class on Gould. As is generally known, to be eligible to this honor a pupil must rank in the upper thirty per cent of his class and measure up to a high standard in character, leadership and service.

The Morris Pratt prizes of fifty dollars each to be awarded to the boy and girl in the Senior class who have shown the most manly and womanly traits of character and the most loyal devotion to duty were awarded to Clifton Jackson and Esther Burris.

The Presentation of Diplomas is always anticipated as a red letter number on the Commencement program, for it is well known that in Principal Hanscom's address to his graduates one will hear words of affection and admonition so chosen and so expressed as to be a real treat for each and all of his hearers, and this year was no exception. Principal Hanscom urged the young people to cultivate those qualities of dependability and faithfulness to the task at hand which are constantly emphasized by Dr. Hanscom in his daily contacts with his pupils.

After the singing of the effective Class Ode written by Margaret Dalzell, benediction was pronounced by Rev. L. A. Edwards. The graduates, thirty-eight in number, were then marshalled from the hall to be followed by friends and relatives eager to extend congratulations. The orchestra was most generous with its music throughout the program.

Alumni Luncheon

One o'clock found nearly one hundred and sixty alumni and friends assembling in the spacious dining room of the Marion True Gehring Students Home for the Alumni Luncheon.

The decorations were in green and white in honor of the graduating class, whose members were, as special guests of the Alumni Association. Two beautiful bouquets, gifts of the school, bore the names of Mrs. Gehring and Mr. Bingham.

Actions spoke louder than words in expressing the appreciation of the delicious luncheon served by Mrs. Mary Chaplin and her competent helpers.

In the unavoidable absence of President, John H. Carter, Jr., Mrs. Agnes Brooks Twaddle gracefully presided. After the usual reports had been read and accepted the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Agnes Twaddle
Vice President—Alton Bartlett
Secretary—Maxine Clough
Treasurer—Carrie Wight
Executive Committee—Mrs. Doris Lord, chairman; Herbert Bean, Louis VanDenKerckhoven, Betty Anderson, Margaret C. Herrick, Thomas I. Brown, Dorothy Goodnow Tucker.

Principal Hanscom read a telegram of greetings and congratulations from Mrs. Gehring, Mr. Bingham and Dr. Farnsworth, whereupon the Secretary was instructed to send a telegram of appreciation and greetings to these absent but loyal trustees and friends.

The thought of Dr. Gehring's passing since the last Commencement brought a note of sadness not only to the hearts of those who knew and loved him, but also to the hearts of all friends of Gould Academy who will ever honor the memory of this Christian gentleman to whom the school owes so much.

The custom of endeavoring to have a special reunion of each fifth year class was continued and responses were given either in person or by letter by the following representatives each bespeaking the loyalty of his class and its joy in the ever widening horizon of Gould's usefulness.

1888—Mrs. F. L. Edwards
1893—Mrs. Molly Chapman Wilson
1903—Mrs. Agnes Twaddle
1908—Mrs. Lillian Buck Vall
1913—Carroll M. Valentine
1918—Eugene VanDenKerckhoven

1923—Dorothy Goodnow Tucker
1928—Mrs. Emily Way Brown
1933—Leslie Learned
Mrs. Twaddle then called upon Principal Hanscom whose message to the Alumni is always of keenest interest. In his introductory remarks he expressed his appreciation of the large number present.

He paid his tribute of respect and love to Gould's oldest living alumnae, Mrs. John M. Philbrook and Mrs. O. M. Mason, and asked that the secretary send greetings to these alumnae, each of whom has passed the four score years and ten.

Dr. Hanscom in reviewing the past school year spoke of it as having been highly successful. The registration and attendance have been the largest in the history of the school, a fact worthy of note in these days of financial strain when so many schools are forced to close their doors.

Dr. Hanscom paid fitting tribute to all those loyal friends who have made possible the continued progress through the years of his administration, making special mention of Mr. Bingham, Dr. and Mrs. Gehring, Judge A. E. Herrick, and Liberty Holden. Dr. Hanscom's hearers were not unmindful that to him, alone, was due a tribute second to none, for through his far-sighted vision, his never waning enthusiasm, and his unparalleled devotion to his task of making Gould Academy a peer among institutions of its class, the school is today entering upon a more far-reaching field of service, since through the erection of the new building, larger numbers of boys and girls can come under its influence. Dr. Hanscom gave a detailed description of the new building, another and greater monument to the unbounded generosity of Mr. Bingham at whose name the alumni audibly gave expression to their appreciation of this gift, which would seemingly be the climax in the expansion and usefulness of the school at the hands of Gould's chief benefactor.

A description of the new building has already been printed in the Citizen, so suffice it to say that it will be a modern building in every respect with seemingly nothing left to be desired in its plan.

At the request of Dr. Hanscom his intimate friend and Commencement guest, George F. Durgin, D. D., of Townsend Harbor, Massachusetts, was called upon. With interesting stories to illustrate his point, Dr. Durgin urged the graduates to establish a goal and then to bend every effort to attain it.

The last speaker was Principal Ralph L. Hunt of Hebron Academy who rejoices with Gould Academy in all the good fortune which has come to her. Principal Hunt's daughter was a member of the graduating class, thus giving him a direct personal interest in the school which he commended very highly.

Principal Hunt's address was in the main directed to the graduates but his words were an inspiration to everyone present. He said the majority of people were just ordinary individuals but if they wished a high degree of success they must do more than the ordinary amount of work. He emphasized the fact that in spite of the seemingly overcrowded conditions in the professional and business world there is always room for the young man or woman who is willing to make the effort to excel in a chosen work.

Gould songs were interspersed in the program with Mrs. Doris Lord at the piano. With the singing of "Gould" the company left the tables, some for a social chat with old friends, others for the baseball field where the Alumni won the game over the Gould varsity team by a score of seven to one.

Senior Reception

The reception given by the graduates to their friends was, of course, a delightful occasion. The class was assisted in receiving by Principal and Mrs. Hanscom, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Park and Miss Ella Litchfield. Arthur Kendall's orchestra of Portland furnished the music. Following the reception dancing was enjoyed until it was time to say good-night. The ninety-seventh year of Gould's usefulness had come to a successful close.

Tune: Flow Gently Sweet Afton

Margaret Elizabeth Dalzell

Dear Classmates, we're gathered to now say farewell
To schoolmates and teachers, with grief none can tell;
But farewells can never break friendship's loved chain,
That four years have welded, and firm will remain,
Soon out from these portals, our feet turn away;
But we'll always remember our dear old "G. A."
To lessons we've learned here, we'll ever be true,
And always we'll cherish the gold and the blue.

Dear Gould, may thy spirit go with us, we pray
To guide and inspire us on life's rugged way.
The past is now gone, but the future is ours;
Help us to improve it with all of our powers.
O, dear Alma Mater, how glorious thou art!
Thy walls may soon change, but unchanging, thy heart:
Thy arms grow more ample, thy youths to enfold;
But thou wilt be ever, Dear "G. A." of old.

Thursday.

Mrs. Annie L. Rowe has closed
her lunch room on Church Street, stored her household goods and gone to Paris Hill to serve as cook this summer for Mr. and Mrs. Kimball Atwood of New York. Misses Uraula and Anita Rowe will also serve as maids at the same place.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin L. Bowker of Portland were callers at H. R.
Tuell's Thursday morning, and Mr.
Tuell went home with them, remaining until Friday night.

Mrs. Jennie Brown Dunham has sold her house, known as the Martha Dunham place, to Mrs.
James W. Wight of West Paris and son Hugh B. Bethell of Auburn.
Mr. and Mrs. Wight moved from the Masonic block into their new home last Friday.

NORTH NEWRY

There was a good attendance at the graduation exercises of the Newry schools, at the church last Friday afternoon. There were four graduates this year, all girls,
Blanche St Cyr and Bertha Olson
from the Branch School, Ina Bean and Miss Nowlin from the Sunday River School. Each presented an essay after which the diplomas were presented by Supt. Bodge.

Following this each school gave a very fine entertainment of dialogues, songs and instrumental music. Miss Cobb, "Head of the Tide" teacher, with her "Toy Orchestra," (with Richard Bennett, director) made quite a hit. Miss Hinton's school auctioned off the Class of 1933 in a very pleasing manner.
Miss Cameron's school put on an entirely Dutch program of recitations, Dutch customs, songs, etc., which was enjoyed by all. Miss Newton's school presented "A Court Scene" which was very cleverly done, a State of Maine
Song by the school, and a dialogue.

GOULD ACADEMY, CLASS OF 1918, ENJOYS OUTING

The Class of 1918 of Gould Academy enjoyed their second reunion since graduation at Silver Lake, Roxbury, on Friday, June 9.

The several cars left the campus at ten a. m. daylight saving time and reached Silver Lake OK—only going about twenty-five (?) miles an hour. The younger members of the class went in swimming and enjoyed motor-boating on the lake, while older and more dignified ones stayed at camp and discussed the most interesting events of the day. One event occurred after coming back from swimming which was discussed by Eugene Van and Dr. Harry Young.

Cribbage was enjoyed by some of the members but had to be stopped on account of the arguments that ensued. Picnic lunches, ice cream, and lemonade, etc. (?) were enjoyed, by all, especially the children.

Eugene evidently didn't forget anything—even balloons and numberless toys for the children—but the chief souvenir of the day was given each member by Eugene Van—a hand made framed picture of the old Administration Building of Gould as we used to see it.

Officers were chosen for our reunion in 1918—Eugene Van, president; Mary Averill, secretary; Naomi Bean, corresponding secretary. After taking several pictures of the group the party broke up, pronouncing it a splendid thing.

Those present were: Mrs. Mary Gorman Averill and son Frederick of Rumford, Mrs. Naomi Smith Bean and daughters Valerie and Alice of Bethel, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Fortier (Dorothy Hutchinson), daughter Joan and friend Priscilla Carver of Bethel, Miss Kathryn Hanscom and fiancé Carroll Bailey of Bethel, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hastings and daughter Virginia of Bethel, Mrs. Jennie Jones of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. William Hastings and children William Jr. and Barbara of Bethel, Dr. and Mrs. Harry N. Young of Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Van Den Kerckhoven and children Eugene and Lois Ann of Bethel, and Charles and Alton Bartlett of Hanover—owners of the camp at which the reunion was held.

Warren Bean is hauling birch for Mrs. Charles McInnis to the mill at Locke Mills.

Mrs. Nell Seabury of Worcester Mass., is spending some time at the Whitman Cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Mills of Poland Springs were recent guests of his mother, Mrs. Emma Mills.

Mrs. Estella Goodridge has proven a popular visitor at the Citizen office this week. On her first visit she invited the staff to inspect a volume of old records dating back to 1738 which are in her possession. On her second visit there was no one to greet her, but proof of her presence is in the Citizen staff munching molasses cookies like grandma tried to make. Yes, they're good cookies.

Mrs. Maud O'Reilly is spending several days at Gorham, N. H., as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Libby.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Abbott and two children and Mrs. Clara Abbott were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Smith at Birchmont Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Lord were in Portland on Friday.

Mrs. Mabel Some of Haverhill, Mass., is visiting her niece, Mrs. Laurence Lord.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dustin and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Corey of Auburn were Sunday callers of Mrs. Cora Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendall Bickford and baby, Gene, and Mrs. Lucy Morse of Norway were dinner guests on Sunday of Mrs. Cora Brown.

Deferred

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Maddocks of New Haven, Conn., are glad to welcome them back for two weeks. They are staying at Camp Logwood.

Leland Mills spent a week with his sister, Mrs. Warren Martin, in Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Abbott and family were in Errol, N. H., last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Hutchinson and son, Richard, spent several days in Portland last week.

Mrs. Estella Goodridge was in Gorham, one day last week.

PASSENGER TRAINS MAY BE TAKEN OFF

The Public Utilities Commission ruled last week that the Canadian National could discontinue trains 14 and 15 between Island Pond, Vt., and Portland on account of light traffic. A hearing was held at South Paris some time ago and the public raised a strong protest, but the railroad's figures showed that these trains were being run at a heavy loss. It is reported that the change may be made June 25.

A protest meeting will be held at the upper hose house tomorrow (Friday) evening.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Sunday — another perfect June day—a counterpart of last Sunday. A little rain fell during the past week for which all are thankful.

All kinds of hoed crops should be in the ground before the 20th is a good rule to observe for this part of New England.

Harry Silver has commenced digging out for the foundation of the new house which will be built for his family this summer.

Waldron Rider has been working for the past two weeks at the Benson House, doing general farm work.

Nearly everyone has attended the graduation this week and remarked on the excellence of the programs presented. We are pleased to have a representative of So. Woodstock, Linwood Andrews, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Harland Andrews, among those graduating Wednesday, June 7, from West Paris High. Mr. Andrews expects to enter Maine School of Commerce in September.

Willing Workers were entertained by Mrs. Wilma Hendrickson at her new home recently built. This was the first opportunity given to see the new house so a large crowd was on hand to enjoy the afternoon which was spent most profitably. A good program was given and nice refreshments served. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Elizabeth Russ.

A deep sea fishing party left So. Woodstock early this Sunday morning. The truck load was in charge of Charles "Pat" Silver. The party was enroute for Portland harbor where transportation to the fishing banks had been previously arranged.

The "Molly Ockett" took the trail for Auburn Sunday to accept a challenge thrown out by the "Whomen," employees of the Wiseman Manufacturing Co. This is an event looked forward to annually as the strength of both ball teams is well known and keen sporting rivalry at high pitch. A big turn out made up the crowd from South Woodstock, standing room in transportation being at a premium. The score was 12 to 2. The "Whomen" in a most friendly way acknowledged their defeat treating the whole visiting crowd to generous quantities of Wiseman and Co.'s famous ice cream.

The "Derbies" of South Woodstock, an old time fishing party of much renown some fifty years ago, who annually each month of June spend a week more or less at the lakes on a fishing trip, were this week represented by about twenty-five of the descendants of the old timers under the chaperonage of Harland Andrews, son of A. M. Andrews and grandson of the late Isaac Andrews, one of the first pioneers of these expeditions, and from whom the parties obtained the name "The Derbies." The outstanding feature of their respective fishing costumes must be topped by an old fashioned derby hat, an emblem of high standing in their particular party, which to this day observes all the rites of old time handed down traditions.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON

(By REV. GEORGE HENRY)

PHARISAISM

I attended a session of a "Men's Bible Class" one Sunday morning in a certain city. The leader of the class was a lawyer of note. In the course of his talk he said: "There is one way in which we may win the world to the Church, and only one way. It is thus—we must ostracize those who are not Christian. We must say, I will have nothing to do with a man who is not a Christian; I will not buy goods of him; I will not sell to him; I will not enter his home nor permit him to enter mine. Men would soon find it to their advantage to enter the Church and Christian men are sufficiently numerous in all walks of life, in every business and profession so that this plan is practical. What do you say to that, Mr. Henry?" I said: "That is as far from Christ and Christianity as the devil and hell. Christ was the friend of publican and sinner. He entered their homes and he was their guest. He associated with Judas Iscariot. Christ's followers must do the same."

Times were not as good as we bragged they would be a few years ago, and times are not as bad as we complain they are at present. We were foolish then, and while the present depression should teach us a lesson perhaps we are not learning anything. We are blaming it on somebody else all the time.

STATE OF MAINE

To all persons interested in either of the Estates hereinafter named. He was nervous; his pudgy eyes roved helplessly around the room. The one I changed. I was taking it to Marland Tailoring company for cleaning and cleaning. Now we're clearing up of the mystery. Jim turned again. "Suppose you check on that, John. Just 'phone company and make sure they the suit, will you?"

Reagan started to rise. Max Vernon stopped him. "The boy's eyes were round with beads of perspiration stood on his forehead. 'I said hoarsely. 'Clothes are not there.' 'You didn't take them?' 'No.' 'Where are they?' 'I don't know. I guess I—I—'

Reagan was an unfortunate man," murmured Jim. "Lost a good suit of clothes that way. Anyway, after losing that suit, I drove on up to Steel City, didn't I?"

Reagan hesitated. Then he nodded. "Yes."

When you got there you found in your car on a new one. And paid the difference. Twelve hundred dollars in cash. Did you get the money?"

Reagan gave it to me. He owed it. When did he give it to you, Vernon?"

When you went to his room?"

I guess he sent it to you by special messenger or something. Never mind that, though. There is one thing I want to know. How did it happen that there was any flour rug in the car when you got to Steel City?"

That haunted, haunted light in his eyes. "I don't know anything about any rug."

Isn't there one in your old car?"

Don't know. You sure are a forgetful fellow. Now what about that knife Reagan showed you an hour or so? That is yours, isn't it?"

Yes. I've traveled a lot and always collected queer weapons."

Do you have it in your hand at the moment?"

You know it is the very thing with which Thayer was killed?"

Now that's what Mr. Reagan told me. It wasn't on your wall when you always kept it, didn't it?"

How was I to notice that the things were gone? And I killed Pat Thayer, Mr. Hanvey?"

Yes, spoke softly. "Admitting that. Why did you get up in the robbery of the Marland National bank?"

He stood rigid for a moment, sank down on the cot. He hid his face in his hands. "I have nothing to do with that, either. Mr. Hanvey, honest I didn't."

The two detectives faced each other solemnly in the warden's office.

"Will you tell me why," Reagan asked—"when you had Vernon on the run, you didn't chase him? You knew he was lying, didn't you?"

"Sure, John. Sure. And the more questions I asked the more lies he was gonna tell."

"Well, I'll say this for you, Jim Hanvey: You seem to rock along with all the delicacy of an elephant—but if you haven't learned a heap about this case."

"What, for instance?" Inquired Hanvey interestedly.

"In the first place, it's a cinch that Max Vernon killed Pat Thayer."

"You think so?"

"Sure. Don't you?"

"Turned if I know, John. I couldn't say for sure, anyway. There's still a lot of loose ends."

"There always are on a case like this," snapped Reagan. "Whenever a big crime happens we run out and grab all the facts we can. They all look important because we don't know which from what. But after we look into it we see that some of the things we thought were important really don't mean anything—and so we forget 'em. That's the way in this case: we've got Max Vernon dead to rights. Any jury would convict him."

Jim nodded heavily. "They certainly would. That's what makes it so tough on the kid—provided he's innocent."

Reagan changed his tactics. He pointed an accusing finger at Hanvey. "Anyway, Jim, you think he was mixed up in that bank robbery, don't you?"

The fat man reflected for a moment, then nodded. "Yeah—I do."

"And that," exclaimed Reagan, "is the first definite admission I've gotten out of you yet."

Jim smiled. "I am dumb, ain't I, John? Suppose you tell me just now you think this murder happened. Just sketch things over, will you, so they'll take their proper places in my mind."

"Good enough," Reagan whipped out his notebook and consulted it. "May first, eleven thirty: Tony Peyton runs across her husband making love to the kid sister of the man who's crazy about Big Row Thayer. Fifteen minutes later after she's gone Ivy Welch and Pat Thayer meet Max Vernon. Thayer has been tripping Vernon for two years and the kid has just got word and wise because Thayer went too far when he copped Max's girl. Another quarrel. While that is happening, Tony Peyton is warning Larry Welch that his sister is in trouble, and telling him why."

"At half-past twelve Pat Thayer gets to the fraternity house and goes to his room. Five minutes later Max Vernon comes in. He's sore as a goat and when the two kids on the veranda tell him Thayer's in his room he says he doesn't give a damn. Maybe he didn't then, Jim—but don't forget that he had found out where Thayer was, and he had just quarreled with the man over a girl."

"Vernon goes to his room. He has been broke and worried. Some way—Lord knows how—he's entered into a deal with somebody to rob the Marland National bank. He's nervous and desperate. He decides to go and have it out with Thayer right there. Thayer is a bigger man and stronger, and so Vernon grabs that silencer off the wall to have it handy in case trouble comes."

"Meanwhile Tony Peyton has come in to warn Pat he must lay off Ivy Welch. I believe every word of her story of the visit. She beats it, and right after she does Vernon goes into Thayer's room and talks cold turkey to Thayer. Thayer probably starts at him and the knife cuts his jugular vein. Vernon's cock-eyed scared. He beats it back to his room and pitches the knife into the corner of his clothes closet. Then he changes his clothes because the suit he had on when he killed Thayer was all covered with blood—which is why he never went to that jailer at all."

"Then he tries to take part in that bank robbery. He gets to the bank corner just about two o'clock. During the robbery the stick-up man is shot. While Max is driving him he bleeds all over the back of the car, so Vernon gets rid of his bloody suit and the floor rug. Then he takes his share of the hundred thousand berries that they've copped from the bank."

"He trades in his old car and is fool enough to think he's got a good alibi. But a couple of minutes after he sets foot in his room at the fraternity house, the man on duty grabs him and calls me. Ain't that a good case, Jim?"

The big man nodded slow approval. "Duro near perfect," he applauded. "Only, how come Thayer was alive when Larry Welch got there at two o'clock?"

"I—I," snapped Reagan. "He wasn't. Thayer was dead then. But Larry knew Tony had been there and he didn't know anything about Max Vernon. So he thinks Tony Peyton killed Thayer and shields her. Cinch, ain't it?"

"It seems so. And the ring Ivy had given Pat Thayer?"

"Larry Welch took it. Didn't want his sister mixed up in the mess. Don't you see how clear everything is? I'm sorry for Max Vernon, of course. There ain't anything bad about the kid. Just weak."

Hanvey was silent for a moment, then looked up brightly. "What'd you do with all the stuff Vernon had in his pockets when he was arrested?"

"Right here. Want to see it?"

"Yeah. . . ."

Five minutes later Reagan returned to the room. He spread out on the table the contents of Vernon's pockets: a handkerchief, a fountain pen, a notebook, several visiting cards, a fraternity pin, a bunch of keys, less than two dollars in silver, a packet of cigarettes and a box of matches.

Hanvey fumbled with the collection. "This all, John? Didn't he have a wallet?"

"Yeah," Reagan flushed. "It's in a special box in the warden's safe. Nothing in it but some money."

"How much?"

"Two hundred and ten dollars. I'll get it—"

"Never mind," Jim was holding the bunch of keys in his hand. "Doesn't this look like a new key, John?"

Reagan nodded. "Sure does."

"Bank box, I'll bet," observed Hanvey, as though talking to himself. "Uh-huh, new bank box key. When's the next train for Steel City?"

Reagan consulted his watch. "Midnight."

"I wonder if you'd run up there tomorrow alone?"

"Sure I will. I can be back to-morrow evening. What's the big idea?"

Jim detached the key from the ring. "Take this with you, John. I've got a hunch that Max Vernon rented a box at some big Steel City bank. Take some samples of his handwriting with you, because he'd use an assumed name, of course. You can check up on all boxes rented in the last couple of days—then compare the handwriting."

"And if I find the box shall I take a look inside?"

"No-o. We'll just take it for granted that if he rented a box there the Marland bank money is in it—or, anyway, Vernon's share. What say?"

Reagan rose. "I'm on my way chief. At the door he turned. "And if we do find that cash Jim—and it turns out to be Vernon who had it—will you admit then that I was right?"

Jim smiled broadly. "Maybe," he said. "I'll sure think you were pretty near right, anyway."

CHAPTER XII

WARM brilliant sunshine bathed the courtyard when Tony Peyton and Larry Welch walked out on bonds to temporary freedom. There was Ivy Welch, wearing a great deal older than she had been four days previously, yet impressively youthful withal, and a score of Larry's undergraduate friends, young men and women who had come down to congratulate the young couple on what every one considered the end of their jeopardy.

Ivy was particularly happy. "They wouldn't have let you out if they thought you were guilty, would they, Larry?"

He shook his head. "I don't believe so, Sis."

"Good!" She clasped her hands. "All the time you were there, Bud, I couldn't think of anything except—except—"

He squeezed her hand. "Don't you worry, Kid, I didn't have anything to do with it."

Tony was with a group of her particular friends and Larry nodded toward her.

"Why don't you and she make up, Sis?"

Ivy's face grew stern. "I don't like her."

"Why?"

"Because she started all this. If she hadn't lusted in on Pat and me; if she hadn't run to you; if she hadn't been such a fool as to go to Pat's room in the fraternity house. . . . Oh! can't you see, Larry, that I can't help believing that Pat never would have been killed if she had minded her own business?"

"I'm sorry you feel that way, Sis. You know I'm crazy about her."

Ivy sighed. "I guess I'm just a crab, Bud. But if I feel that way—well, I can't help it, can I?" Then she reached out impulsively and pressed his fingers. "Maybe I'll get over it."

Later in the day Larry and Tony met by Old Main and walked toward Pine top. . . . a knoll which rose above the surrounding country and from which one could look down upon the Marland campus, and thence still farther to the sprawling town of Marland. Half the student body saw them together and every young man and woman made a point of waving cordially, but no one joined them. The students were more than a little embarrassed. They wanted the pair to know that there was every belief in their innocence, every sympathy, every willingness to do whatever was necessary by way of help. . . . but there was a natural hesitancy in intruding on their privacy. The tragedy had cast a sort of ghastly mantle about them.

They reached Pine top and stood regarding each other; the man tall and blond and very boyish-looking, despite the tiny lines of worry about his eyes, the girl vividly beautiful. Their hands were clasped and they drank deep of the wine of freedom and of their joy at being with each other again. It was Tony who spoke.

"You know how I feel, Larry. About what you did."

He frowned. "What did I do?"

"Telling those detectives that Pat was alive when you left his room. Of course I know he was n't."

Larry's cheeks blanched. "How do you know?"

"I know how Larry. That's all I wanted: To trick an admission from you. It was fine of you, dear. But we must go to Mr. Hanvey and tell him the truth. That Pat was already dead when you reached his room."

"But I didn't say—"

"Oh, yes you did, Larry. Just a second ago. Now listen to me: I don't know what you think about him—but I believe that terrible-looking Mr. Hanvey is one of the most wonderful men I have ever met. He can tell when we're telling the truth and he knows when we're lying. I told him the truth, dear—even when it looked like I was tightening a noose around your neck. I was scared and yet I wasn't scared. Everything I said seemed to increase your danger. Mr. Hanvey looked like he had gone to sleep. Then the next thing we knew we were released on bond. Mr. Hanvey knows a lot. And if he's going to help us, we must help him."

He nodded slowly. "I guess you're right." His face was very serious. "It's kind of tough on Max Vernon, isn't it?"

"I'm sorry for that boy. Terribly sorry. And yet if there is ever justice, it was then. We have no right, Larry, to keep the truth from a man like Mr. Hanvey, who is struggling to help us."

"We'll tell him."

They stood in silence for several minutes. Overhead a mocking bird trilled gayly; the pine trees swayed softly in the warm breeze which swept in from the countryside. The air was freighted with the fragrance of flowers and on Pine top there was no suggestion of anything but ineffable peace and happiness. It was so different from the solitary confinement at the Marland jail; so glorious a relief from the staring at four blank walls and a tiny square of barred window. They were very young and very much in love with each other, and Larry moved so close to her that their bodies touched.

"When all this is over, Tony, you will marry me?"

She looked straight into his eyes. "Yes, Larry."

"I'd like to put into words. . . to be able to tell you how much I love you. . . ."

"When All This Is Over, Tony, You Will Marry Me?"

"You don't need to. I understand."

His arms closed about her and he held her close, staring hungrily into her eyes. Then suddenly, he buried his face in her hair and so they stood for an age of time.

All that afternoon the campus hummed with crazy rumors and wild conjectures. It was one thing to read in the newspapers of a murder and quite another to come in contact with one. The students were impressed by their own importance in having known intimately the dead man and the three suspects. Then there was a feeling of depression, as though the college had been sullied. And the two boys went around with chips on their shoulders.

Although nobody dared utter a word of criticism.

The afternoon dragged away. Larry worked over his class books, trying to rid himself of the effects of the experience and wondering what the future had in store for Tony, for himself, and for Max Vernon. And in his room at the hotel, Jim Hanvey sprang on the bed and devoured a detective story.

It was there that John Reagan found him. Jim put the book aside reluctantly.

"Gosh," he commented, "it's great—that story. Just as soon as I get interested in something like this, you have to come butting in. What is it?"

Reagan spoke crisply. "On the morning of May second a man answering Max Vernon's description—and there ain't any doubt, Jim, that it was Vernon—entered the American National bank of Steel City and rented a box. He gave the name of William T. Arason. He took the box with him into a little booth. Then he left the bank. The box is number two. . . . and unless I'm all wrong—and a lot of Brother Fisher's last money right there."

"Good work, John. You didn't look in the box?"

"No. You said not to. But I left word that no one was to be allowed in there, even with a written order from Vernon. That's good and tight. And so—"

The telephone buzzed and Hanvey answered.

"This is the warden of the jail," he announced the voice at the other end. "Miss Peyton and Mr. Welch are down here. They want to see you as soon as possible."

"Send 'em over to the hotel, will you?" Then he turned away from the telephone and grinned boyishly at his friend.

Welch and Miss Peyton are on their way over, John. Stick around if you want. I have a hunch we're going to hear some interesting dope."

TOWN SCHOOLS GRADUATION TOMORROW EVENING

The graduating exercises of the town schools will take place at the William Bingham Gymnasium at 8 o'clock Friday evening.

Honor parts have been awarded to the following: Margaret Tibbets, Barbara Moore, Erland Wentzel, and O'Neil Robertson of the village school; Laurence Perry, West Bethel, and John Holt, East Bethel. Violin and cornet solos will be rendered by eighth grade pupils and other music will be furnished by the orchestra of Prof. Mainente.

The public is cordially invited to attend the exercises.

HERE AND THERE IN MAINE

Harding Wentzel was saved from drowning Friday by the prompt action of Melvin Leader, a schoolmate, while at the swimming hole in the Androscoggin near the Virginia School, Rumford. The boys went from the school during the noon hour and Wentzel fell into the water beyond his depth. Both live at South Rumford.
